

2017 Dickson Awardee: David N. Bailey

During his more than three decades as an active faculty member, David Bailey served not only as chair of the department of Pathology but also as Dean of the UC San Diego School of Medicine. He was also interim Dean and Dean of the School of Medicine at UC Irvine during its formative years. Since retirement, he has been recalled to service as Distinguished Professor Emeritus of Pathology and Pharmacy, Vice Chair for Education and Academic Affairs in his department, and Deputy Dean of the Skaggs School of Pharmacy & Pharmaceutical Sciences, and Medical Director of the Respiratory Care Satellite Blood Gas Laboratory of the UCSD Health System.

Dr. Bailey was recognized by the Institute of Scientific Information as one of the world's ten most cited authors in forensic sciences and he received the Gerald T. Evans Award from the Academy of Clinical Laboratory Physicians and Scientists in 1993 for his leadership and service to the Academy. He has also served on a multitude of boards, such as at the Doris A. Howell Foundation for Women's Health Research, George G. Glenner Alzheimer's Family Centers, Inc., Children's Hospital of Orange County, Children's Healthcare California, and the Rady Children's Hospital of San Diego.

At the same time, he has revised and taught the Core Course in Laboratory Medicine he previously designed and taught. It is now an extremely popular two quarter elective for second-year medical students. The 300-page course manual he has developed for this course is currently in press for publication as a textbook. And in addition, he organizes programs for the student Pathology Interest Group, mentors its members, directs undergraduate medical education, and serves on the advisory board of the UCSD student-run Free Clinic project and as a member of the Independent Review Committee on Conflict of Interest.
